Allelic deletion on the short arm of chromosome 8 in human endometrial cancer is associated with multicystic endometrial hyperplasia. To determine whether allelic deletions in the short arm of chromosome 8 are a characteristic of endometrial carcinoma or whether they occur only in endometrial hyperplasia and carcinoma. To determine if allelic deletion in chromosome 8 in endometrial hyperplasia and cancer is a prognostic factor of disease outcome. Prospective study. University hospital. Fifty-eight patients with endometrial hyperplasia, 27 patients with primary endometrial carcinoma, and 13 patients with secondary endometrial carcinoma. Patients were treated with total abdominal hysterectomy with or without oophorectomy. Primary endometrial lesions were staged according to FIGO criteria. For diagnosis of recurrence, CT scans and/or gynecologic examination were performed every 3 months for the first year after hysterectomy, and then every 6 months for 2 years, and annually thereafter. The presence or absence of allelic deletions on chromosome 8 was studied by polymerase chain reaction analysis. The incidence of allelic deletions on chromosome 8 in normal endometrium, primary endometrial hyperplasia, and endometrial carcinoma was 5%, 18%, and 86%, respectively. Our study suggests that detection of allelic deletions on chromosome 8 in normal endometrium can be used as a tumor suppressor gene marker
