"Ditto" is a command-line tool to move Windows executable files between folders. It is mainly used to create copies of executable files from different computers to a folder on a central server. Note: You cannot move files from a Windows system (including from a Windows command prompt) to a Linux system. You must install another software like 'WinSCP' in order to accomplish this goal. Features: * Copy the resources of a file (icon, description, etc.) * Copy only the executable of a file * Specify the directory location where you want to move the files * Recursive mode (optionally) * Optionally change the target directory path * Optimized mode * "Force overwrite" option * Auto-rename file Usage: ditto [options] ditto [options] -o source_file target_path [target_file]... ditto [options] -r [path] [file]... ditto [options] -n [path] [file]... ditto [options] [path] [file]... Options: -r, -R Specify the path to the source file directory. -s, --src-file Specify the path to the source file file. -d, --dest-file Specify the path to the destination file directory. -l, --log-file Specify the path to the log file. -v, --verbose Be more verbose when executing the commands. -h, --help Show help
