Gamma-hydroxybutyric acid and acetone as risk factors for injuries in equestrian sports: case-control study. The objective of this study was to assess the association between gamma-hydroxybutyric acid (GHB) and acetone with injuries and severity of wounds in equestrian sports (Table 3). The setting was a single equestrian centre in Athens, Greece, in the summer of 2015. We conducted a case-control study. Cases were adult riders (n = 83) with injuries and controls were the same riders' colleagues (n = 187). Cases were actively injured while being ridden by their colleagues. Controls suffered accidents while riding without being ridden by the same rider. Multivariable logistic regression analysis and the Fisher's exact test were used. Cases were more likely to have been injured while riding in the early morning (adjusted OR, 95% CI: 4.64, 1.13-19.52), had an acetone concentration > 0.60 mg/l (adjusted OR, 95% CI: 6.73, 1.04-42.47) and had sustained a more severe injury (adjusted OR, 95% CI: 4.27, 1.22-14.64). The findings suggest that elevated GHB concentration and acetone levels were associated with the risk of injuries in equestrian sports, and with more severe wounds 6a5afdb4c
