This time, the site of the major South Korean cryptocurrency exchange, Bithumb, has come under DDoS attack. The site has been under a DDoS attack since August 7th, and the hacker group is saying that they will not stop until they block all transactions. The hacker group has already claimed to have hit another South Korean exchange, Coinrail, an exchange, was also hit by the same DDoS attack. It was reported that the hackers did not make the ransom. Bithumb was hit by a DDoS attack in February 2018, and almost a year after, the site was hacked by a group of hackers in May 2019. The crisis of the exchange Bithumb has raised many doubts as to whether there is a fundamental security hole in South Korea. The DDoS attacks are an online criminal's usual weapon used to disrupt the normal Internet activities by attacking the computer networks connected to the victim. DDoS attacks are most often used to attack websites like banks.
