Features: - Technical Details:

GPART Product Key is a project born as part of the Aisigma Institute, a group of web developers and designers working under the aegis of a small web agency, JAS&RODA . The Aisigma Institute was created in 2006 with the aim of creating high quality Open Source Software (OSS). Its goal is to produce easy-to-use and powerful software that is free of charge. The name GPART comes from the fact that we use the JAS&RODA GPART RSS reader to monitor the RSS feeds we all use. In addition, we have used this software to monitor our own RSS feeds, which enabled us to create a new user interface for GPART that makes it look and feel like a traditional newsreader, but with a modern and cleaner look. Like all our software, GPART can be downloaded for free and can be used completely without restrictions. The program is distributed under the GNU General Public License version 3. The program contains a

- * Multipart RSS support: GPART works with RSS 2.0 feed readers, including those from Apple's Safari browser, and supports the common RSS

2.0 aspects: title, description, url, link, date, and author. We have also been able to implement other RSS features such as categories, labels, comments and the ability to add images and audio to RSS items.

- * Can be used to monitor any RSS and Twitter feeds: GPART talks directly to the feed reader, so it will work with any RSS 2.0 or Twitter feed.
- * Very small and fast: our goal was to make GPART as small and fast as possible, and the same goes for its user interface. For this reason, all of the menus, buttons and panels of the
