The line below does not seem to work for me. typedef struct { int id; int value; } cpuStructure; It seems to say the name of the struct is "struct" error: expected identifier before numeric constant I have also tried to use #define but I get the same error. I can not find this error in other place of my code and I have not tried to handle struct from another file. How do I solve this problem? Thank you in advance for your help. A: A typedef in C has no meaning, so the identifier struct is not used as a keyword. You must type out the struct. Q: How to perform a WHERE query using data from a PHP array I have the following post request to an API from PHP: $requests = array("api_id" => "param1", "api_name" => "param2", "data" => array('id' => $id, 'name' => $name, 'email' => $email,)); I have an associative array and I'm trying to retrieve data using the $id, $name, $email variables from the data array. I know the following works: $requests = array("api_id" => "param1", "api_name" => "param2",); $id = $api_name = $name = $email = 0; if (array_key_exists("api_id", $requests)) {
