Five days after the US launched airstrikes in Syria and killed a top official of the ruling Ba'ath Party, the US House easily passed a bill that would permanently exempt the Pentagon from environmental laws. The National Defense Authorization Act contains a provision that would prohibit the US Army Corps of Engineers from enforcing any "inherently governmental" laws against the operations of US troops on the ground. Rather, these "rules, regulations, and orders" would be the sole responsibility of Pentagon commanders. The Corps of Engineers, which enforces environmental regulations including laws against contamination and erosion, is prohibited from enforcing these types of regulations under a 1977 law
