Skill Riding is a free to play racing game based on the old endless racing game we made at the university. The controls of the vehicle is very simple, press the acceleration button to accelerate and release it to brake, give the steering wheel a nice long look to change the direction of the vehicle. The complete control is done with the left hand, the right one is free to play with the graphics and there is two gamepad's for 360 controllers. The single player allows up to three person per car. A free to play mode is planned as well, but it is very early so is the multiplayer mode. The game has it's own server that will host a lot of content, including new tracks and vehicles. The game is designed to be played in a LAN party (must be the same LAN network) to create a larger audience. Planet has a natural gravity field, but as the planet is used up, the gravity is slowly decreasing. Watch out if you park the car in the wrong place, as it will move towards the center of the planet. You can adjust the gravity setting if you want a more stable game. CTRL + ALT + D (CTRL + ALT + Down Arrow) Fastest time : 10,964,094,838.9 Fastest boost distance : 1,611.400 km Slowest boost distance : 0.200 km Start moving when the green key is pressed Traffic meter free to play mode Seasonal updating Compatibility: HTC Vive Dolby Atmos and Dolby Pro Digital 7.1 Audio Play it on Steam : Legal stuff : We are not responsible for anything that happens to you (you're holding the steering wheel...) Edit : Updated the way the boost works, now it stops when the car accelerates. Update : Now we can play this game on Oculus Rift, Vive and Gear VR. We are planning to add more features and more customization options to the game, so be sure to stay up-to-date! THQ is not responsible for the content of this game. Last update: Added vehicle cloud loading. Changed car model. Update 3 : We have added multiplayer modes. When there is more than 1 player using the same car,

Imagine a VR racing game where the body replaces the headset and you can be anyone. Being a racer, freestyler, soccer player or anything else you would love to do in real life. The moment you sit in front of the computer you look at your own feet, the moment you rise up you feel your own body rising. The world around you is in 3D, physics make you able to perform basic actions you want to do like sit down, jump over a hill, take off your shoe to stand on it, stand up again and so on. At the moment we have these animations for the characters: Lift-Up Jump Sprint Run Stand up Freezer-Air Sink Dive Idling Turning Kicking with your foot Shooting You can choose to play to be a racer or a freestyler, or both, then you can practice stunts in different tracks. Once you do a stunt or jump really well, you will be rewarded with a medal on your avatar. Punishment There is also a light punishment system, where you are rewarded for high jumps, extreme maneuvers and other stuff. If you stick your feet into the air with your character on upside down position, you will get immediate punishment. Local Multiplayer Crazy fun and competition between friends, get them to ride as your vehicle and race. Voice Chat You will see the text box on the left that will be the same on both VR headsets. Game Features: Realistic and natural 3D VR Physics with realistic controls of your player You are the character. — A Perspective on Cannabis I'm going to try to cast a little different perspective on this topic than I've seen in response to the current cannabis safety issues that have been discussed on the various newsletters in the past week. Basically, I'm going to point out a few facts that have been overlooked by quite a few, and then maybe get a little bit more in depth in with a few written responses that I'd like to think would go into better detail than I have the time to. Mind you, this article is not intended to convince anybody that they should smoke at all or start any sort of business related to cannabis. It just means that I'd like to share a few thoughts to clarify certain issues that have either been over-baked or over-looked in the several articles put up so far and respond to some questions that have been on my mind. In no way is this article meant to, or meant to be, a "smoking den" for the purpose of promoting cannabis; it's more of a "scholastic", first of all. Cannabis is a disruptive force to society both personally and at the nation-level! Most people smoke but the nation as a whole is actively pressing for legalization. If that ends up going all out rather than half-assed, as both sides are still trying to figure out what direction to take, the internet is going to be blusterously disrupted. As to how? This will likely be determined by the technology coming out and the flexibility that results from it. And as first-world citizens, we are totally reliant on technology. You cannot go anywhere without having access to any form of communication: wireless, gps, voice, and data. The telephone and other forms of communication as previously mentioned have been disrupted fairly badly as a result of the few that were granted the right to share a common human experience with. Today, they have no choice but to continue on with two percent of it's former voice quality. So as to what will happen to cannabis, both in selling it and in getting people to get into a medically or personally beneficial state. The most probable change that will come from this will be money-making. Back in the day people made money giving tours to tourists in aquariums; now that there is one for the ocean, it's clear that they need new stuff to charge for. Without the promises of safety and legality
