Arma 3 Fuel Tanks - Best Combat Rigs - Wiki ARMA 3 Counter=Terrorist Vehicle Rentals - Manage Your Own Gun Rental Service -Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton said Wednesday that she is opposed to new taxes on the middle class, even though her and other Democratic candidates have called for income taxes on the rich to go up. "No, I'm not for raising taxes on middle-class families," Clinton told MSNBC. "I'm for making sure that we grow our economy, we create more jobs, that we make the playing field more level for everybody and everybody gets a fair shot." When asked why she wasn't advocating a hike in income taxes on the rich, she said she opposes new taxes. But when pressed by moderator Chris Matthews on whether she would raise taxes, she stated she will support a hike on tax breaks for the wealthy. Clinton's declaration that she would support income taxes on the wealthy stands in contrast to her 2007 statement that: "I will raise taxes on people making more than a million dollars a year."

Clinton's statement Wednesday may trouble the Democratic Party establishment because the campaign has been floating the idea that she opposes new taxes on the middle class. "I think it is clear that the public really doesn't think that the middle class should be taxed more," Bernie Sanders said Wednesday of the polling that appears to indicate the middle class will be one of the few groups to see an income tax cut under any Clinton presidency. Clinton did not back Sanders's contention at the recent debate in New Hampshire, where she stated that more money needed to go to the middle class. "What I'm saying, Bernie, is we need to have more investments in our people, both directly through government and through businesses, and make sure that we're sharing in the benefits of the economy," she said. Sanders's campaign said that Wednesday's comments were the first time Clinton e79caf774b
