A: Paint.NET from Microsoft and GIMP from GNOME are GNU/Linux (and GNU/Linux-based) implementations of Photoshop's "photoshop.exe". They are reasonably fast, not too robust, and very easy to use. The downside is that they lack a lot of Photoshop's features and have a certain amount of (Mac)style bloat. Some of their features: Photo (or paint) editor. Image resizing. Image layout. Filters. Channels. Color picker. Image preview (can be displayed in windows). Windows and Macintosh versions are available. The comparison is quite simple to understand: I can hardly imagine that this (or an even lower quality software) would be faster than Photoshop. Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., said she does not believe former New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg should be allowed to run for the Democratic nomination because he is a Republican. "I think it's wrong to call yourself a

What's New in the ImageEditor MG?

An easy-to-use image editing software with advanced features and effects. Photo effects are not simply a set of effects: the ideal one is the one that will automatically adapt itself to your image and give you an adequate result with the minimum of manual work. -- ImageEditor MG User manual Please note: the unregistered license allows you to use the software for personal use only. As the software is quite small, I suggest you also take a look at it. . This is inconsistent with the testimony of Christina & Heather, that the Petersons' dogs were sprayed by defendants. It also is inconsistent with the deposition testimony of Nick, Lisa, and Christina, that defendants picked up Lisa, and took her to the Petersons' home. In addition, the description of the Petersons' barking dogs was never stated by Christina & Heather as being the same as defendants' in the beginning of September. The Petersons are the only ones who can establish the precise date the dogs were returned to the Petersen house. Their testimony is that the dogs were back in the house in the middle of September. Defendants' testimony, on the other hand, is that they turned the dogs over to the Petersons' neighbors in mid-September and were gone when they returned to the house in mid-October. Thus, we do not think that this testimony as a whole is such that reasonable minds could not differ. *510 Finally, defendants testify that the third incident (which Christina claims is trespassing) occurred in mid-October. The reasonable inferences from this testimony, in conjunction with the second incident, is that a third incident occurred in October. We find Christina's testimony concerning both incidents is given more credibility than the testimony of defendants. Thus, we think there was sufficient evidence to support the trial court's findings on the second and third incident and the judgment awarding damages. Affirmed. TURSI and KAPELKE, JJ., concur. The present invention relates to a diode array for use in a beam scanning system, an image recording device, and a beam scanning method. A diode array (a semiconductor chip having a plurality of diode elements on its surface) is widely used in a beam scanning system, an image recording device, and the like. For example, in a beam scanning system, a laser diode array in which a plurality of laser diodes are arranged on the
