Consumer App Domains:Q: SQL Server: Can I alias a table alias so I can query as a table? I want to ask if I can alias an alias in SQL Server, so that I can query the results of an alias as a table? For example: `SELECT * FROM (SELECT * FROM Users) u INNER JOIN (SELECT * FROM Profiles WHERE u.Id IN (1,2,3,4)) p` If this isn't possible, is there a work around? Thank you.

A: SQL queries cannot access object names (aliases) like tables.

A: No. SQL is a set-based language, meaning that the objects you want to query are defined in some structure, then you tell the SQL engine which members you want to query.

A: The only thing that can refer to the tables referenced by your query are the tables' name and not their alias. And the alias to the table is not a object, is a system object. So, when you say `(SELECT * FROM Profiles WHERE u.Id IN (1,2,3,4))`, you are telling the SQL engine that you want to join your two tables, but as you mention, SQL engine doesn't have direct access to the alias, so you will only have the tables name that were used to construct the subquery. Then you JOIN the result with users table, which is not possible as well. The only way to do such thing, would be to create a view: `CREATE VIEW dbo.Users_profiles AS SELECT * FROM Profiles WHERE u.Id IN (1,2,3,4) INNER JOIN dbo.Users u ON u.Id = p.userId` Then you can access the view as if it was a table: `SELECT * FROM`

dbo.Users_profiles INNER JOIN dbo.Users u ON u.Id = p.userId
