Since the first book was printed in 1462, the body of literature has expanded exponentially and, with it, the need for Bigger Books—a category that includes any book with a length of at least 7,500 words and no title above 2500. With the rise of the ebook, we are seeing an explosion in the size and volume of electronic books and, so, the Bigger Books need to cope with the novelisation of today. So I wanted to find a solution and set up some minimum standards. Below is the list I came up with, all of which (except the first) are free to use. I'd be happy if anyone was interested in pursuing this.
