The biggest cheesecake in the world is modeled after the Queen of Thailand. Katie Fitt, the owner of Ugly Cheesecakes, is known for her work bringing cheesecake to the masses. The small business has been bringing big cheesecake to the masses in Florida for 12 years. On a day when the British royal family was enjoying the newly married couple and their warm welcome in Thailand, Fitt made an incredible discovery while taking a walk on the palace grounds. Fitt and her husband were walking along the grounds when they noticed the rock wall surrounding the palace was crumbling. Fitt told ABC News, "We were just a few feet from the main gate. We had to stop. It was that moment when you are right at the edge of the wall that you realize it's just falling down." Ugly Cheesecakes creates a signature cheesecake for The Royal Thai Royal Family. Fitt started thinking about the beautiful face on the sign at the palace and decided to make a cheesecake. That cheesecake is modeled after Queen No. 1 of Thailand, Princess Sirikit. The cheesecake is made in classic American style. With that in mind, Fitt knew she wanted to serve it with a piece of fondant cake which is the style in which the queen eats her cheesecake. Fitt went to Thailand to meet with the team that handles the food and was told that cheesecake for the Queen was not possible. "We know that cheesecake was not on the menu of the palace but we were told by the team there that the cheesecake for the Queen is a no-no," Fitt said. Fitt took her cheesecake back to America to think about how she could get it to the palace and who she should contact. Fitt made a connection with someone she knew, Jane Zhang from Chinese Fine Desserts. Zhang's company produces the most popular cheesecake in China and the United States. Zhang agreed to help Fitt and the cheesecake was accepted. The cheesecake is made with a frozen custard, coconut cream, cream cheese, lemon zest and pearlescent salt. "The most important thing about the Queen is that she's not a figment of my imagination or the cheesecake," Fitt said. "She really exists. Her majesty herself also wanted to try the cheesecake so we had to make sure that when we send it to
