SR1 Build 2845.Effect of the interaction between components on its stability and antibiotic activity of fixed-time drug-delivery implantation. A new drug-delivery system based on polymer gel network was successfully prepared by using thermally initiated polymerization. The interaction between the components affected the gel-network's morphology and structure, which influenced the release rate of drugs. The effect of the interaction was studied through comparing the release rates of gentamicin (GM), a low-molecular-weight drug, and gentamicin sulfate (GS), a clinically
