lupus erythematosus (SCNSI) registry. Systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE) is a prototypic systemic autoimmune disease in which both autoantibody production and immune dysregulation contribute to tissue damage. Because anti-nuclear autoantibodies (ANAs) and circulating immune complexes are considered to be pathogenic factors in the disease, most of the treatment strategies of SLE aim at the prevention of autoantibody production. We sought to assess the effectiveness of stem cell transplantation (SCT) for the treatment of severe SLE. We studied 153 adults with SLE. Seventy-one patients (46%) had active disease. SCT was performed in 43 patients (27%). Twenty-four patients had hematopoietic stem cell transplantation (HSCT) and 19 patients had autologous peripheral blood stem cell transplantation (PBSCT). Three patients received HSCT for secondary SLE. Eighteen patients with moderate SLE had PBSCT. Outcome measures included hematological parameters, disease activity, autoantibodies, and the patient's quality of life (QOL). The median follow-up was 59 months. Thirteen patients (11%) had major organ involvement. Three patients died in the HSCT group and four patients died in the PBSCT group. The probability of surviving 6 months was 0.97

(95% confidence interval [CI] 0.95 to 0.98) in the HSCT group and 0.98 (95% CI 0.96 to 0.99) in the PBSCT group. Thirteen patients (19%) receiving HSCT had recurrent active disease but 12 patients (63%) in the PBSCT group experienced increased disease activity. The results of this registry are encouraging and warrant further study. Can Linux Be the Safest OS? - merandus ===== gavingmiller Linux does seem 6d1f23a050
