THE QUARTERLY WORD is a newsletter by and for the campus community. It is published every other week during the academic year. The Outlook To JNU's immediate left is the sprawling law faculty known as the Sharada Banarjee School of Law. Like the rest of the JNU campus, it is known for its left politics. It is where many students, including Dalit students, take their education. In a statement released on February 1, former professor of law Reem Mukhtiar discusses why she thinks the atmosphere in the Sharada Banarjee School of Law is oppressive and what she hopes the university administration can do about it. "I believe that the atmosphere in the school is oppressive and that there is a need for a radical transformation of the system," Mukhtiar says. "The road ahead is not easy. I do not expect that this would happen within a short time, but I believe it is necessary for [JNU] to start evaluating their governance structure, policies
