The possibility that an absence of T-cell help to an allogeneic organ, or the induction of T-cell help to allografts by donor specific antibodies, may be responsible for acute rejection has been explored. Preliminary results show that T-cell-dependent B-cell help is not essential for the formation of anti-donor antibodies. In order to determine the role that specific T-cells play in the induction of tolerance we will investigate the effect of T-cell depletion and T-cell lymphokines in vitro on the induction of mixed lymphocyte-tumor cell (MLTC) and MLC in vivo. Finally, we will investigate the effect of T-cell depletion and lymphokine therapy in vivo on induction of tolerance in neonatal murine solid organ transplants.The new Routines interface as of 1.0.3 is now compatible with the jQuery $.get() and $.post() functions of jQuery. In the case of $.get() we will auto-activate jQuery's xhr object. Using the integrated Firebug XHR panel we can see the progress of a $.get() request as you can see in the screen shot: While we have the new FuelRoutines.js with support for Ajax and XHR, we are still depending on jQuery. Let's start writing our own routines to be compatible with other, lightweight JavaScript libraries. So, if you are interested in the new features in Routines, I recommend you to check the latest version here. We are in the process to make it better and stable. We also added many tutorials with working example showing how to use the new 6d1f23a050
