It's been a fun and great summer, but school starts again today, and I'm looking forward to a less busy schedule. I have a lot of projects I want to finish this semester, and maybe a few of those little things that I had to make do with this summer. I've also been playing around with the color and designs in Adobe Illustrator and Photoshop - a little experimenting on my own here. See more of those on my Instagram. I don't have any special plans - so maybe I'll visit some museums. I'm looking forward to the next few months. I'm trying to do some better craft shows and gallery shows in the Spring. Here's to another great year! Reversal of paraquat toxicity by expression of an antagonist of the estrogen receptor. Estrogen receptor (ER) antagonists, including the selective ER modulator, tamoxifen, are well-documented preventors of estrogen-mediated tumor promotion. Tamoxifen is known to be an antagonist of the ER, and many clinical studies have demonstrated its benefit in the treatment of breast cancer in women. However, tamoxifen also has been shown to be an antagonist of the estrogen-induced anti-tumor activity in animal models. Thus, the beneficial effect of this drug in the treatment of estrogen-dependent human breast cancer, for example, may be attributable to its antagonism of the protective effects of estrogens on tumorigenesis. We have demonstrated that expression of the classic ER alpha isoform in mouse fibroblasts c6a93da74d
