He received the award in 2007 for the discovery that ATP, the molecule found in almost all living cells, controls the production of key enzymes that are needed to power reactions essential to the body's energy production. "We wanted to give the awards to two researchers who were born not later than the 1960s," Professor Ron Vale, the chairman of the Nobel Prize Committee, said. "This year, we were able to do so, with the birth of two very young investigators, Sanjoy Guha and Guido Pinto de Magalhaes." c6a93da74d
