118. As the Church teaches in Pacem in Terris, "sin results in an immeasurable loss for humanity. 'Sin is a betrayal of the authentic good of the human person, a rejection of the truth about God and of the true 'self' of man. The purpose of the Lord's mercy toward man is to restore us, to reunite us with the image of the Creator.'" The remedy is not simply a return to innocence in the past. On the contrary, the cure of sin is a continuing work of salvation: "To be reconciled with God is 'to be healed.' Jesus Christ is 'the remedy to our disease.' This healing is made possible by the sacrifice of Jesus, which is not a saving work in past time but a saving power which continues to renovate man's free will, until he is wholly restored to God. The Church bears witness to this active work of God in the redemption accomplished by Christ, beginning with the reconciliation of man to God. In order that man may never cease to be reborn, she proclaims the Gospel anew every day. She is the missionary in the world who brings the vision of God, the image of God, the reality of God to the whole of humanity: a reality which continues to attract and continue to lose people, for a renewal of man 'never ceases' because it is from the heart of God." Ages ago, when God scourged the world with pain as a sign of the horrors of sin and the arrival of the kingdom of Heaven, his Son gave himself as a ransom for many, who were being held as slaves and on account of their transgressions of the law were under God's sentence of punishment and alienation from his love.[955] In the face of the current moment of profound secularization and the the consequence of the loss of the consensus of religious and other values, an awareness of the need to re-evaluate the cultural value of human life, as well as of the integrity of the person, acquires a new significance. The teaching of the Church on the value of the person is in conformity with the basic law of creation which reveals the greatness of the creative act of the Creator for the realization of the true good: that of rediscovering authentic human values, in particular the sacredness of life, and recovering its full meaning. In her social doctrine the Church for her part keeps alive a living hope in the renewal of a culture of the heart which can in turn make light of the ills and threats of the world and give assistance to the process of conversion of which the current period shows so many signs. A culture based on truth, love, justice and freedom, a culture which is in accord with the nature of the human person, an authentic culture of dignity and of peace, is a prerequisite for advancing with certainty on the path of renewal of society. If humanity today does not give witness to the value of the person, if it does not acknowledge and respect the dignity of each human being and is ignorant of his or her divine origin, it will not be able to claim the full fruit of the arrival of the kingdom of God.[915] 5ec8ef588b
