Considering the fact that Lightroom is practically a must-have for many photographers these days, the improvements offered by the new Lightroom are quite impressive. However, not all of these new Lightroom 5 features are worth the upgrade – there is nothing better or more useful than a camera or scanner/printer manufacturer providing "off-the-shelf" RAW exporting solutions. Such a feature would be based on the camera's RAW file and provide the ability to automate workflow, for example:

- capture original image
- crop to the desired aspect ratio on the fly
- resize and export to a desired output type
