ESPN analyst and former NFL great Michael Strahan has died after a battle with cancer. He was 52. Strahan announced his diagnosis Jan. 5 at an ESPN studio in Connecticut, saying, "I am not going to let anything stop me from being the first to win Super Bowls on the field and on the air." His announcement raised a huge amount of awareness and money for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. He also had been battling cancer in his eye and said he was about to undergo surgery on his retina, according to a report by the New York Post. Strahan played nine seasons in the NFL, winning one Super Bowl (XLIII) and being named the league's Defensive Player of the Year twice (2000, 2001). But he was best known as one of the stars of the "Golic and Wingo" show alongside former ESPN commentator and college football expert Tony "Golic" Golic. Fellow ESPN analyst and former NFL quarterback Trent Dilfer called Strahan "the greatest interview I have ever seen. He was as good as it gets, a class act," in a tweet. Michael Strahan was the greatest interview I have ever seen. He was as good as it gets, a class act. — Trent Dilfer (@TrentDilfer) September 15, 2017 Strahan was the first player to have won the NFL Defensive Player of the Year award twice and the first player to win Super Bowls in different career positions — as a defensive end and linebacker. "He was the ultimate competitor and he wore his heart on his sleeves every day," said Tom Coughlin, the head coach of the New York Giants, where Strahan played for 14 seasons. "He was a special person, a great player and a great teammate. He will be missed," Coughlin said in a statement. ESPN called Strahan a "vanguard of sports television," saying, "His work on 'SportsCenter' cemented him as one of the most recognizable faces in all of sports. ♦
